

This puzzle has two parts: this document and this image.

It was originally part of a larger puzzle hunt (i.e. a chain of puzzles) that I put together in 2017, but it still can stand as its own work.

In that original puzzle hunt, I gave solvers the document at the start of the hunt, but of course it was useless without the image, which was given later without any context linking it to the document. There's nothing particularly interesting required to solve the puzzle, but I loved the idea that the document could be sitting out in the open, totally impenetrable, until it was suddenly given meaning by the lowly empty tree.

The answer is inside this box in white text, which you can highlight to reveal. If you are using a screen reader, know that only spoilers follow.
